

Ottawa, Week by Week

(By DEAN WILSON)

Increased Momentum

There seems to be an undercurrent to increase the momentum of the activities about Parliament Hill so that this session may be completed as quickly as possible under the circumstances, and in fact, circles would not be surprised if such rapid progress will be made in order that this session may close earlier, though this is not likely to be true of some work by committees which may have to carry on after the session ends, and particularly by the committee on social security or post-war problems. However, a precedent has been set already, whereby the work of a committee can be continued even when Parliament is not sitting, and it may happen again.

Subsidy System

Why should the subsidy system be restricted to industry or to producers of those commodities and be denied to agriculture? This has been asked in the House of Commons, pointing out that subsidies were being paid on coffee, tea and oranges, without endangering the price ceiling. "It is not," countered Hon. J. L. Isley, Minister of Finance, "the principle is the same," replied the member quickly. "There are subsidies payable to agriculture amounting to at least $100,000,000 a year," said the Minister.

Canada's Foreign Affairs

There is definitely no objection against any discussion in Parliament of Canada's foreign affairs, and this can be done before the dying days of this session. This has been hinted gently. M. J. Coldwell, leader of the C.C.F. party, had suggested that it would be of value if at an early date the Prime Minister would call on them in his estimates, so that there might be a discussion of Canada's external affairs in order to obtain a clearer understanding of some of the things which may be becoming the issue. In reply, Premier King said that he was not sure that Parliament should get on with its business as rapidly as possible and, before any new subject should be discussed, matters on hand should be concluded. "I agree, I meant not to leave it to the dying days of the session," said Mr. Coldwell, and he shall undertake with pleasure to see that matters of foreign policy are discussed before that date," answered Premier King.

Within One Hour

After seventy-seven members had spoken in Parliament on the subject of the budget in thirteen days of actual sitting, Canada's biggest budget in the whole history of this country, namely, $5,500,000,000, was passed in its motion stage in the House of Commons, with three straight divisions within one hour's time and with the government being supported on the C.C.F. amendment, that is the sub-amendment 156-10, on the Social Credit amendment 156-4, and on the final motion 142-14.

Looking Ahead

While no details have been given out yet it has been disclosed in Ottawa that the government has been investigating international commercial aviation and inter-continental committee has been functioning for months, with this body offering timely advice to the Government as a result of its investigations and in line with conditions, so that in reality Canada is keeping tabs on the world in regard to this likely common method of international travel or transportation.

Nothing Had Happened

Following a request by a member to know if anything had taken place since last summer to warrant the Government to cancel its promise at that time not to send conscripted men overseas prior to a vote in Canada's Par-

21,000 Car Licenses Issued

Despite gasoline rationing and other restrictions, car licenses in Alberta this year do not appear likely to fall far short of the previous year's total, according to figures of the activities around the Motor Association.

For instance a compilation made by the provincial government officials just received, and of which showed that 21,000 passenger car licenses had been issued. At the same time a year ago, the total was 21,000.

A year ago, it is pointed out, there was a big rush to buy licenses in March, due to a number of factors, which were influenced by the prospects of rationing.

This year there was not the same rush in March, as it is believed that the rationing system has become more stabilized.

There also is the belief that many motorists will be returning to the new license limit system.

As a result, there is a strong belief on the part of provincial authorities that the showing for the year of April will prove that there still are many Alberta car owners who intend to operate their cars in 1943. At the same time it is recognized that the federal restrictions are bound to curtail pleasure driving. But on the other hand, cars will be used more and more for essential purposes.

Alvin, Premier King made this important statement: "Well, Mr. Speaker, as the question arises if anything has occurred to cause me to change my mind with respect to an important statement I had made to the House, I will answer that nothing has."

Problem for the Lenders

In view of the information already revealed in the House of Commons, that the Federal Government is anxious to obtain the consent or the co-operation of the various Provincial Governments in any plan of social security, and any such national plan may involve serious constitutional questions, since the British North America Act has granted certain powers or rights to each of these matters to the autonomy of the Provincial Governments, there is considerable discussion backstage along Parliament Hill regarding the usefulness or need of another Federal-Provincial Conference, to examine now or to investigate these important problems on national security, as well as others which may involve the joint or individual interests of the provinces, especially where questions of jurisdiction are concerned.

The Real Story

It was alleged in Parliament that serious fuel shortages had existed throughout this country during this winter so that in some instances, it was stated, people had to burn fences, doors and shade trees in order to keep warm, and it was predicted that a dire winter would follow in 1943-44. As a result of these charges, a debate took place in the House of Commons and it reached its climax when the Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, disclosed that whereas coal consumption had gone up almost fifty per cent in this country, yet production had only been raised by fifteen per cent. Then again, Canada had to depend a great deal upon imported British coal and this supply had fallen down considerably. In addition, as a matter of fact, he said that an unusually large amount of coal was bought by Canadians last summer since almost any amount was available at that time, but this was one of the severest winters in fifty years so that all anticipated requirements were gradually exceeded. He indicated that the wood fuel situation was different since Canada produced 7,500,000 tons of cord wood each year, but three-quarters of it never reached the market because those who cut it used it, and there was a 500,000 cord shortage. Nevertheless, he seemed inclined to the belief that there would be enough fuel for everybody next winter.

Victory Gardens

Lathbridge Experimental Station, Lathbridge, Alberta

Today the farm garden or Victory Garden is receiving a great deal of attention, and rightly so. As one writer stated when referring to the use of more gardens: "It is a warlike 'must' that our people should have a more extensive use of the soil, foods which carry the essential minerals and vitamins so necessary for health." If these small gardens are used on the farm or vacant lot, they are available at little cost to the consumer. By raising bigger and better gardens we are performing a patriotic duty, and saving transportation, are reducing demands on the commercial garden, thus allowing them to supply more produce to military camps, and are decreasing our purchases of processed food that must be made available to our fighting forces.

The garden should be looked upon as a year-round source of food products. This will bring up the question of storage and preserving. Some vegetables can be kept for a long time in a good root cellar; others must be canned or dried. Drying of fruits and vegetables should receive more attention this year. It is common to build drying cabinets that are used for only after the rest of the farm work was completed, was invariably doomed to failure.

A L.A. garden club competition have proven that good gardens can be raised even in the drier parts of the province. The success and failures experienced have gone to show that we must have good summer-fallow, that snow must be tramped for spring run-off, or some type of garden irrigation system developed. One of these practices will be applicable to every farm. Which one are you practicing?

The small prizes paid to the winners have added interest to the endeavor, but the money paid out in prizes has not been a major objective of the competition. The satisfaction of having a good garden, the produce that the garden has supplied and the judgment and suggestion from the organizers are the things that have made such competitions well worth while.

The successful gardens in all of these competitions have been those who have planned their work and have looked upon the garden as a source of food, and not as a hobby. The garden that has been considered

HOW MUCH DID YOU SAVE LAST YEAR?

One of these days a man will call on you to talk to you about saving money. The caller will be one of your neighbors, or a man from your nearest town who is likely well known to you.

He is asking you to save money when he asks you to buy a Victory Bond. He is not asking you to give money to anybody or anything.

You save money when you buy a Victory Bond . . . and you lend your money to Canada to help win the war. The money you save is yours. You will get it back later on, and have it to do anything you wish with it. And Canada will pay you 3 1/2 interest on your savings every year until the loan is paid back to you.

TAKE A FEW MINUTES TO FIGURE OUT HOW YOU ARE GETTING ALONG

This is something that every man should do now and then.

You will see how you are getting along by comparing savings with earnings. It's what you save that counts.

Perhaps you will say you saved all you could. Did you? Remember you are asking yourself questions. You are not getting figures to show anyone but yourself. Can you figure out how you can save more?

A sure way to save money is to save it in small sums—as you get it. Victory Bonds—which can be paid for in small installments covering a six-months' period—provide a convenient method of carrying out a savings programme. Your Victory Bond salesman will tell you all particulars.

WHAT IS A VICTORY BOND?

A VICTORY BOND is the promise of the Dominion of Canada to repay in cash the full face value of the Bond at the time stipulated, with half-yearly interest at the rate of 3 1/2 per cent until maturity.

A Victory Bond is the safest investment in Canada. The entire resources of the Dominion are behind it. Canada has never issued bonds for 75 years, and has never failed to pay every dollar of principal and interest.

A Victory Bond is an asset more readily converted into cash than any other security.

SUBSIDIES AND THE "JUST PRICE"

From Ottawa comes a report that a member of Parliament, Mr. Norman St. John, has introduced a bill to provide $4,000,000 annually to help manage their affairs, know so little of what has transpired around him that he demanded to know: "Why should this subsidy system be restricted to industry or to producers of those commodities, and be denied to agriculture?"

The answer, as most people know and as given by Mr. Haley, is that agriculture has been subsidized; and on an increasing scale, until now the assistance given to agriculture by way of subsidies amounts to the sum of $100,000,000. As a matter of fact, so widespread has become this system of subsidies to various enterprises, that the Hon. Mr. St. John has remarked that in its laudable desire to prevent inflation the Ottawa government has been forced to certain phases of Social Credit.

While it is easy to understand this line of reasoning, insofar as there is every evidential reason to attempt to establish a "just price," both to producer and consumer, in such everyday articles of consumption as milk, cream, butter, tea and coffee for instance, yet the claim that Ottawa is pursuing a system of Social Credit as a policy of government is quite in error. The "just price," as advocated by Mr. Aberhart, is not a system of government, but a system of economics. The Hon. Mr. St. John, who is a member of the House of Commons, has said: "It is not that which can be applied to the same phase of the problem, but the fact that Social Credit is a system of economics, and that of Major Douglas, its founder, appears to be very wide indeed. Commenting on the peculiar combination of schoolmaster-preacher, grafted upon an unusually ambitious politician, Mr. St. John said: 'The political experience of social scientists, the official declares: "It would be possible to combine the technical basis of Social Credit propaganda was understood by him (Aberhart) and, in fact, his own writings and speeches are defective both in theory and practicality."

Whether or not the decisions of Mr. St. John and his right hand man, Donald Gordon, are based upon some adaptation of Social Credit, the result of the policy otherwise may be left to the pundits. But the fact is inescapable that by ruling, insofar as is possible, the subject matter should be adjusted to the shoulders of those most fitted to bear it, these measures have been of inestimable advantage to the country as a whole. Subsidies are paid out of taxes taken from those with the means to pay; the taxes are shared by all consumers. The chief blessing, however, is enjoyed by the unemployed, who with out such protection would be wholly at the unstrained mercy of the inflationists.
